

Biography

Dmitrii SUVOROV, Senior Researcher, Department of Health Risk Analysis, Federal Research Center for Medical and Preventive Health Risk Management Technologies, Perm, Russia

Age: 36 years

Education: graduated from the Perm State Medical University named after Academician Wagner in 2016, specialty “preventive medicine”. Completed postgraduate studies in hygiene from 2017 to 2020. The topic of the thesis is "Hygienic assessment and experimental justification of safe levels of intake of N-nitrosoamines with food products for feeding young children (on the example of canned meat)"

Scientific interests:

Health risk assessment from the impact of environmental objects (food, atmospheric air, water, soil). Novel food risk assessment’s methodology investigation. Study and modernization of new approaches to the assessment of chemicals’ exposure in foods. Studying the health effects of currently non-regulated chemicals. Searching of “points of departure” for hygienic standardization including food standardization (for example, proposing to limit MRLs for antibiotics in food).